Katrin Förster

I'm Katrin, a psychologist and consultant at ELIGO. I am motivated to gain a better understanding of people and processes. I am passionate about supporting people in their professional development. To this end, I work closely with customers and engage in interesting discussions with participants in our assessments. I like to share my related knowledge in online seminars.

“Nearly everything you do is of no importance, but it is important that you do it.”
(Mahatma Gandhi) All of us leave our own individual mark on the world with our behaviour, and that's what appeals to me about working with people.

Professional focus and project experience

- > Developing new potential analysis methods for specific target groups, including all-in interview guidelines, role plays and case studies, for example together with a customer in the agricultural sector
- > Regular holding of potential checks lasting several hours
- > Developing and implementing individual, specialised case studies for applicants in the energy sector
- > Managing large-scale recruitment and staff development projects, including for health insurers and the public sector
- > Holding structured interviews in cooperation with specialist departments for several industries
- > Training HR and specialist departments on topics such as interviewing and AC/DC observation
- > Implementing individual online assessment profiles in close consultation with client companies
